THAT the war debts issue is brought to a head by the outright default of Great Britain long after the others quit paying, is generally conceded.

U.S. Will Accept Debt Payments in Part Goods, Cash

Roosevelt Enlarges on Settlement Plan of Secretary Hull

EUROPE IS DIVIDED

London Dislikes New Proposal, But Paris, Rome Warm Up to It

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt is willing to consider payment in goods by European war debtors only on a partial basis, it was disclosed at the press conference at the White House Wednesday.

A suggestion for payment on that basis was made in a note to Great Britain by Secretary of State Hull.

The reaction abroad, however, was divided, with indications of disfavor in London, and possible favor in Paris and Rome.

President Roosevelt offered no comment on the threatened steel strike.

Waive Overdue Balance

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A strongly worded note Tuesday night reminded Great Britain that its credit standing was involved in its debts to this country and suggested that efforts would be considered for reducing the debt or for payment in goods and services.

The note to Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, from Secretary Hull, set forth three points in response to the British debts note of June 4. They are:

1. Great Britain would have to pay off the amount of the June 15 installment to avoid being considered in default under the Johnson law.

2. There is no connection between the debt owed the United States by Great Britain and those owed Great Britain by other countries.

3. The United States government will be glad to entertain proposals for adjustment of the debt for payment in goods and services.

"The British government undertook to borrow under its own name and on its own credit standing, and repayment was not made contingent upon the fate of the debts due to the British government."

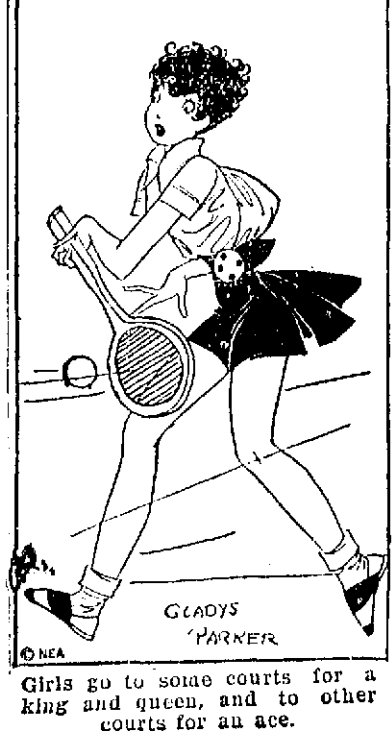

After explaining that this government interpreted the recent note of Great Britain as indicating that the government did not intend to make any further payments until the United States scaled down the debt to a point acceptable to Great Britain, the note said:

"Should his majesty's government wish to put forward proposals for the resumption of payments, this government would be glad to entertain and discuss them informally. No proposal has been presented to this government looking towards payment in kind to an extent that might be found mutually practicable and agreeable."

"Any proposals which promise mutual benefit will be carefully considered for eventual submission to the American Congress."

Papers Slighted Hero of Rangers in Barrow Death

Newspaper Trade Journal Flays "Martyrizing" of Gun-Toting Pair

HAMER, PLAINS ACE

Texas' Crack Shot Gave Barrow a Chance—Beat Him to Draw

Editor's Note: The newspapers did a wretched job of reporting the death of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, according to the current issue of Editor & Publisher, newspaper trade journal. Marlen Pew presents the following account of Texas Ranger Frank Hamer, who was the real hero of the occasion.

The handling of the recent sensational Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker killings by the press associations, is the subject of a severe criticism by Stuart N. Lake, former New York newspaperman who is now writing as a specialist in western romance, residing at San Diego, Calif. I note a letter bearing his signature in San Diego (Calif.) Union, together with an approving editorial comment in the same newspaper.

He complains that the reporters who sent that thriller over the wires gave columns to the rat killer and his cigar-smoking ilk, thus glorifying the gun-fighting ilk, but only a couple of sticks to the real hero of the battle at Acadia—Frank Hamer, Texas ranger, who gave the criminal terrorists a chance to surrender and, as they reached for their guns, drilled both in a split second, though Hamer's right arm is practically useless.

The True Story

We all remember the conventional lead of the press association stories on the Barrow-Parker shootings, but Mr. Lake suggests a substitute that, instead of heroizing the vicious pair, would have served a good social purpose and for once put the right emphasis on true heroism.

Had he been on the job Mr. Lake says he would have written: "Frank Hamer, Texas ranger, who in 30 years as a peace officer has never failed to get a criminal whom he went after, got Clyde Barrow and his woman companion, Bonnie Parker, outlaws and murderers, near here today. He 'got' them in typical Hamer fashion, shot them to death when the pair refused to surrender and went for their own weapons—a machine gun and a pistol—to kill him as they had killed a half-dozen other peace officers who sought to arrest them."

But, as the editor of the Union remarks, to write that sort of a lead the reporters must have known Hamer as did Mr. Lake. Apparently the ranger was a stranger to them. Mr. Lake refers to his 30 years' acquaintance with Hamer and he dramatically briefs his history, which he also complains was omitted from the Barrow-Parker story, although the reporters did not fail to look up and print the criminal background facts about the two victims of the gun-play.

The Texas Ranger

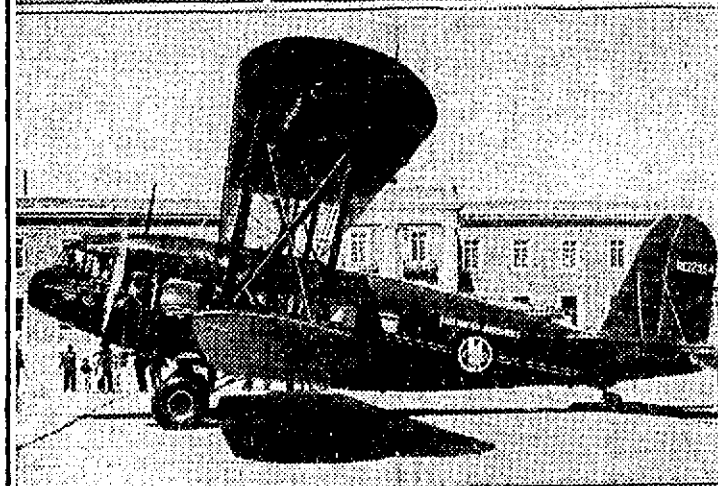

Read what Mr. Lake says of the Texas hero: "Frank Hamer's probably the best shot the rangers have had since Jeff Milton quit the service. He can put five shots out of his 45 into a dollar-target at 50 feet, any time. I saw him do this once, so fast I didn't believe for several minutes that he had done it."

"I never could get Frank Hamer to talk about the fight at El Forvenier, a ghost town of adobe—a ghost town—on the Rio Grande. He took two other rangers in there on the top of two outlaw-killers were held up among the shacks. In place of two, they burst into a gang that had killed more than one border patrolman. The outlaws opened fire. Hours later the rangers rode out, all wounded, but behind in the shacks and streets of El Forvenier they left 16 dead outlaws and Texas had 16 fewer problems for the criminal-coddlers to worry over."

"Years before that, when Frank was fairly new in the rangers, two killers whom he had been sent to get met him face-to-face in the street of a village in the Big Bend country. Hamer told them they were under arrest, to throw up their hands. Instead, they went to shooting. A shot struck Hamer's right arm as he pulled his gun. He couldn't raise the pistol, so as he fell to the ground with another bullet in his leg, he dropped the gun, picked it up with his left hand and as he lay in the dirt shot and killed one of the assassins. The second outlaw turned and ran. Citizens who picked up

Crash in Dangerous Catskills

Crashed in the Catskill mountains west of the Hudson river, with all seven aboard dead, the Curtiss Condor plane of the American Airways, center, was found by a posse of planes, state troopers, and hundreds of residents. The plane, bound from Newark for Chicago, was found in the rough wooded section of Rip Van Winkle legend, after it passed Newburgh. The plane was piloted by Clyde Holbrook, LaGrange, Ill., top left, with Miss Margaret Hockerby, Chicago, top center, stewardess, and Co-Pilot John Barron, 33, Chicago, top right, as other crew members. Below, left to right, are shown three Buffalo, N. Y., passengers, W. B. Bader, H. C. Coppins, and W. A. Cass. Harry Pinsky, formerly of Great Neck, N. Y., was a fourth passenger.

AUTHOR OF REPORT

Thompson Admits He Dictated Blast Against Recovery Codes

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Declaring that "the development of the NRA reveals more clearly the trend toward Fascism in the United States," W. O. Thompson, former partner of Clarence Darrow, resigned Wednesday as a member of the Darrow Review Board.

In a statement delivered at the White House, Thompson said: "The trend of the National Recovery Administration has been and continues to be toward the encouragement and development of a monopoly capitalism in the United States."

Thompson said that he alone was responsible for the preparation and conclusions of the recent supplemental report of the board which recommended the socialization of industry.

The report was signed by Thompson and Darrow and was accomplished by a general indictment by the entire board of the codes' operations.

Carnera and Baer to Meet Thursday

Champion and Challenger Pronounced Fit for World Title Bout

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Max Baer and Primo Carnera escaped successfully Tuesday from the New York state athletic commission, stamped for the last time healthy and physically fit for the fantastic duel of the daffodils in Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island Thursday night.

For the second time within a week three commission doctors searched the monstrous heavyweight champion and his California challenger for signs of spavin, spring halt, wind sucking and assorted germs. They found only that Carnera had a sore throat, a slight sinus infection, and a very worried look.

Baer, as usual, showed no signs of anything, including nervous thought and though it was his poor training camp showing that brought on the first physical inquisition last Friday, he appeared Tuesday to have passed his second quiz with the higher rating of the two.

The closer the warriors draw to the 15 round engagement that has suffered from more adverse developments than any championship tilt in modern times, the more obvious it becomes that Carnera's condition, and not Baer's, is the thing to worry about.

While downpours of rain added another crowning blow to the ticket sale Tuesday, which now seems likely to wind up around $300,000 rather than the expected $500,000, Carnera rushed away from the commission doctors to his training camp, and boxed four fast rounds with two sparring partners. He looked fast, boxed well, but he appears to be finely drawn and he hesitated when he said his weight was 238 pounds.

The experts believe that the weird maneuverings of the irresponsible Baer, the cold that has gripped the champion, the perhaps too lengthy training, the flabbergasting developments of the ballyhoo, finally have captured Carnera's natty goat.

The bookmakers picked up enough Tuesday to resume taking wagers on the outcome and Carnera was reinstated a 13 to 20 favorite in Jack Doyle's book. The odds are 2 to 1 against Baer scoring a knockout, 2 to 1 against Carnera flattening the challenger.

Jap Envoy Found, Planned Suicide

Kuramota's Absence Nearly Plunged Japan and China Into War

NANKING, China.—(AP)—The strange disappearance of Elmal Kuramota, Japanese vice-consul who vanished here last Friday, threatening to bring about a grave situation between China and Japan, was cleared up Wednesday when Kuramota was found sitting in a graveyard, unkempt and hungry.

When found, he said he had gone to the cemetery to commit suicide because he failed to achieve a promotion in the consular service.

Japan had informed the Chinese government officially that it would hold it responsible for the safety of the vice-consul, and backed up the note by rushing warships here.

Hoover Classmate Accused of Fraud

Hodgson Charged With Theft From Bible Publishing Firm

NEW YORK.—Casper W. Hodgson, who was Ex-President Hoover's classmate at Stanford University, was accused Tuesday of embezzling $330,000 from his own Bible-publishing firm and spending it—in the trite words of the complaint—"on wine, women and song."

The accusation was made by one of his editors, Dr. Arthur S. Otis of Yonkers, N. Y., who also charged that the publisher had fled to California and now is living in luxury on one of his several ranches.

The book magnate's wife, Mrs. Balm Hodgson, who was named as a co-defendant in Otis' suit to collect $29,403, accused her husband of leaving her penniless in New York. She is living at the Women's University Club.

In 1929 Hodgson was sued for $84,000 by L. J. Josephine Anderson Phillips, for a parole maid in his Yonkers home, who said he seduced her. He settled out of court for $15,000.

Three years later Miss Mildred Fortunato, Hodgson's former secretary, sued him for $56,205 on a similar charge. The outcome is not recorded.

Dr. Otis, editor of school books for the last 13 years at the World Book Company, from which Hodgson resigned as president last July, declared he and his wife had loaned the published $29,402 on two promissory notes. The loan was more or less compulsory, he said, and told the court, most of the funds thus acquired were used to get Hodgson out of jams with women.

Cully Cobb Sends Out Inspectors on Plea of Farmers

Penalties to Be Applied Where Overplanting Is Discovered

GIN PACT REJECTED

Loss of Right to Fix Own Rates "Destroys" Market Agreement

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Cully Cobb, the Farm Administration's cotton chief, announced Wednesday that field men had been instructed to measure every acre of the cotton acreage requirement contracts to assure compliance.

The checkup, which will cover other phases of contract compliance, was said by Cobb to have resulted from a request by co-operating farmers. If overplanting is found, or the contracted acreages are smaller the contracts stipulate, the supervisors will indicate additional requirements for compliance.

Hot Springs, Ark.—(AP)—Arkansas and Missouri ginners here Wednesday rejected a proposed marketing agreement for the industry because of the elimination of a clause in the original agreement allowing ginners to fix their own rates.

The resolution rejecting the agreement was adopted unanimously, the members alleging that the changes in the original agreement having destroyed its usefulness.

While the agreement as a whole was rejected, the members accepted a price of 35 cents per hundredweight for ginning clean-picked seed cotton.

The nominating committee recommended the re-election of all officers. S. J. Smith, Luxora, is the president of the organization in this state.

A. B. Banks Makes a New Beginning

Incorporates Insurance-Service Business at Fordyce

LITTLE ROCK.—A. B. Banks, former head of a large chain of banks, and three insurance companies which failed following the closing of the American Exchange Trust Company here in 1930, filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state Tuesday for a new insurance agency to be known as the A. B. Banks Company of Fordyce.

His three sons, Lawrence H. Banks, A. B. Banks Jr., and R. T. Banks were listed as holders of 99 of the 100 shares and the elder Banks was the holder of a single share. The firm will operate as a local insurance agency and inspection service company. It is capitalized at $25,000.

Banks was pardoned by former Governor Farnell of a one-year sentence imposed in 1931 on a charge of accepting deposits in the American Exchange Trust Company, knowing the bank to be insolvent. Later he formed an insurance partnership with James A. Pattillo and announced that "he was starting all over again." This partnership was dissolved after several months.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

First Lady and Tugwell Put Canning Regulations Across . . . Copeland Wanted Wrangdorn, But It Was a Girl . . . German Women Slaves? Never, Says Envoy.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—Eleanor Roosevelt and Rex Tugwell are virtually an unbeatable team.

They finally provided the big push at the White House which gives us consumers almost the only major victory won for us under the New Deal. The result probably will be that every time you buy a can of sardines or corned beef you'll be able to tell from the label approximately what's inside.

Almost unnoticed, President Roosevelt tackled on the canners' code a provision demanding that the ten-billion dollar canning industry appoint a committee to work with NRA and produce within 90 days recommendations for standards of quality and labeling requirements on canned foods. The standards finally worked out will be inserted in the code.

It's likely that all cans will be labeled AR, B and C—superior, medium, and inferior—in accordance with regulations Department of Agriculture standards already used in the trade and by American canners operating in Canada.

The immediate effect of the Roosevelt order is to revive the drooping spirits of the AAA Consumers' Counsel office and the NRA Consumers' Advisory Board, which have suffered from a growing sense of futility, but joined together in a supreme battle against the canners on this "grades and standards" issue.

The consumer groups organized a spectacular parade of standards advocates before the code hearings, including representatives of most organized women and workers. Afterward they worked on Mrs. Roosevelt, who soon came out publicly for the proposal.

The canners successfully fought to keep standards out of the code, which went through NRA without it, receiving General Johnson's approval.

It was then that Tugwell went to bat at the White House. Roosevelt did one of the most remarkable things yet heard of under NRA when he overruled the protests of a major part of a big industry.

Canners are bitter against such "government interference in business." Roosevelt recognized a strong popular demand, however. He may or may not have heard that when the National Association of Retail Grocers recently questioned housewives as to whether they wanted government minimum standards stamped on can labels, 96.6 per cent said they did.

Senator Copeland of New York was so upset at hearing that his son's wife had produced a baby girl that he wouldn't speak to anyone for a whole morning. He had yearned for a grandson who could be called Royal S. Copeland III.

Secretary Ickes probably is the hardest-working cabinet member, but also the most meticulously exacting. For instance, he refuses to sign letters unless they have exactly four spaces between the "yours truly" and his typewritten name. He has returned for recopying every letter that had three or five.

President Thomas Girdler of the Republic Steel Co., regarded as the steel industry's toughest anti-union leader, recently said he would retire to his little apple farm before he would deal with President John Lewis of the miners and certain other A. F. of L. leaders. Some months previously Girdler had signed a "captive mine" union agreement with Lewis.

Blond, active Doris Stevens, famous feminist and leader of the National Woman's party, recently met German Ambassador Hans Luther at a garden party and at once demanded to know why the Nazis were giving their women a "slavery" status. Luther hastened to assure her that she had been misinformed, that German women were being given newer, better opportunities and that they were all happy. The argument went on quite a while, but didn't get anywhere.

One of the top row debaters here goes around telling her friends of the superior service an equipage of a certain large New York hotel. She is on the hotel payroll for doing just that.

This might be a healthy place for John Dillinger to come to—or it might not. There's no law here requiring physicians to report cases of strange patients with bullet holes to patchy scars. On the other hand, the local coppers claim to have solved all but four of the 218 murders committed here in the last three years. (Yes, that's right. We average six murders a month here.)

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Problems Facing Mothers in Teaching Discipline—Too Much Obedience May Sap Child's Courage

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall says some pertinent things in her page on the modern mother in the current Liberty. One is this—I quote her directly. "Any phase of living requires discipline, and discipline in its turn requires training. I, personally, think that we are facing a world which will demand more instead of less disciplined individuals. I believe that a child who is healthy and whose home is happy needs discipline mainly as far as the routine of life is concerned. This routine, of course, includes all of his habits of living."

And I, personally, think it is the whole thing in a nut-shell. In a few words she has expressed the entire situation.

Yet I believe that most modern mothers are confused, and rightly, by the contradictory advice of child-guidance teachers, who one day pronounce the need for self-development in the child—individualism, self-reliance, and courage—and the next go on to say that children must be controlled and must learn to bow to law.

Guided by Habits

These two seemingly opposed forces are the hardest things in the world to reconcile. They seem to cancel each other. But not necessarily so.

Both can be done and done well without interference.

The magic of this lies largely within the mother herself.

Her greatest aid will be the routine habits of the daily life of her child. He begins to recognize very, very early the things expected of him. He must have his bath, he must go to bed on time and he must go to his meals on time. A dozen other things are added to this regular routine from year to year. The influence of daily habit is unbeatable in teaching discipline. The mother who realizes this has just about won the battle.

Next comes the question of those innumerable daily occurrences that demand specific orders on her part and that the child should obey.

This is where the trouble comes in. We call these direct orders, or denials, by a long name—"superimposed law." Too much of this superimposed law, or bossing, ruins self-confidence and saps courage, yet the child must respect it or he will grow up an utter stranger to control. On the other hand, too little of it is a bad thing, too. Look Behind Behavior.

The mother who sees both sides and who can figure out her child is fortunate. She will know, at least much of the time, when he must be made to respect this discipline, and when he may be allowed to exercise his own independence. She will look behind behavior for motive. She will not require of a little child perfection of deportment beyond his years. She will recognize the innate sense of justice in all her children. She will not let a single misdeed lead to a complete loss of respect for her. She will not let a single misdeed lead to a complete loss of respect for her.

I believe the swing away from discipline has been too extreme. Children are going to need especially the self-discipline that lies within themselves. Every leader in any walk of life needs self-control. Strong but pliant, iron that bends but does not break, a plant that adjusts itself to new soil and grows.

Parents need to be just but firm. Too much qualified obedience is no obedience. But discipline, or routine obedience, is seldom questioned once it is established.

Socialists have voted to resist war to the end, so they can tell their grandchildren how they fought the war to resist war.

Ultimately, says a scientist, we'll lose the use of our fingers and thumbs. How terrible for the hitch-hiker!

The disarmament conference is a failure since some of the nations would rather lock arms on the battle field than block arms on the conference room.

Joan Crawford says radio stars should not marry. But if they don't marry, how when can they get divorced?

Young John Jacob Astor says life is difficult for him because of his riches. If pressed further, he might agree that life would be a bit more difficult without his riches.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

CHAPTER XLII
BILL was sitting by the window staring out at the falling snow. He did not turn when Donna entered. She crossed the room and slowly began to remove her dress. She said, "I told you a lie tonight, Bill."

"I know you did."

"I went to town."

"I know that, too. Why?"

"It didn't occur to me that you would object," she evaded.

"I don't know that I did object. Not to your going to town."

"You deliberately tricked me into lying," she said hotly. "That was objectionable."

"Why did you lie?" He rose and came to her. How small she looked and how pale! The healthy bronze of her circus days was gone and her features looked pinched and tense. There were shadows under her eyes and a pathetic quiver about her lips that made his heart ache.

"Because — because I could see you mistrusted me—and you had sworn nothing—nothing could ever make you doubt me again. I wanted to see—to see if you—"

"His laugh cut like a rapier. 'Testing me, eh? Thanks. After giving me a couple of rotten hours visioning you freezing to death in the snow you think it's sporting to test my trust. Thanks!'"

"Bill!"

"Next time I won't waste my anxiety, but I would like to know what made you change your plans. Or didn't you intend to go to the Adamsons when you left?"

SHE did not answer. Slowly she reached for her nightgown and went into the tiny dressing room adjoining.

From a closet she took out blankets, spread them on the couch in the dressing room and flung herself upon them. Every bone and muscle ached as though she had done hard manual labor. She felt she would never sleep again, but outraged nature rebelled and soon she was asleep.

Bill lay awake, reviewing his life with Donna. Little incidents that had seemed of no importance took on new meanings—the strange antipathy between Madeline and

Mrs. Planter, the sudden exit of the housekeeper, the telephone call that had upset Madeline so. Had Mrs. Planter written the anonymous letter? Who else? It would be characteristic of the woman to strike back in such a fashion, but even Mrs. Planter must have had some basis for such statements.

There was one thing Bill could do. He could find out if the circus performer was in Lebanon and what had brought him there. After that Madeline would have to make an explanation or—he groaned and dug his head into the pillow. Suppose he learned she was unfaithful? What would he do?

Long before Donna awakened Bill was up and dressed. Madeline had not yet arisen when he descended to the kitchen. He made coffee and drank it, black and strong. He mixed the mash for the cattle and filled pails of "slop" for the hogs. Then, in rawhide boots, cap and coat, he plodded through the snow to the stables.

THE storm was over. There were huge drifts in the farm yard but a streak of crimson in the sky gave promise of a sunny day. The car Donna had used the day before had not been taken into the garage and was completely snow-covered. The radiator must be frozen, and probably the engine was water-soaked.

After he had fed and watered the animals he got out the sleigh and hitched the horses to it. He was going to find out whether Con David was in Lebanon or not.

Breakfast was being served at the Commercial House when he hitched the horses in front of the building. A drummer who had to catch an early train, the conductor of a freight that "made up" in Lebanon, and a farmer who had stayed in town because of the storm were sitting at the long table reserved for "regulars" as Bill stalked into the office.

Pete's red head appeared from behind the desk, followed by Pete's freckled face and wide-toothed grin.

"Hello, Mr. Siddal," he chirped. "You're sure in town early."

"Yes. Mind if I look over your register a minute?"

Pete's answer was a grunt, intended as a negative. The register lay open on the desk and Bill made a rapid survey of the names before him, then flipped the pages to the day before. Only one name appeared, "Con David, Chicago."

Until he saw that name, heavily scrawled, he had clung to the hope that the circus performer was not in town, that the anonymous letter had been the work of a vicious imagination. Shock momentarily obscured the features of the small boy, the register, the walls about him.

Pete's voice brought Bill back to the necessity of hiding his emotions. "D'ya know who that is, Mr. Siddal? It's the feller that was here with the circus last spring, the feller that went into the cage with all them lions and tigers. But, pshaw—of course you know! I plumb forgot your wife was with the circus, too, and that Con David came here to see her."

"I don't think he came to see Mrs. Siddal," Bill said quickly. "Of course they are friends but—"

"Oh, yes, he did," Pete insisted. "Or he wouldn't a-written her a letter right away."

"How do you know he wrote her a letter?"

"'Cause I delivered it for him. Didn't she tell you? He gimme a dollar."

"Regular plutocrat, eh?" Bill mumbled. "I'd like to see Mr. David." The name stuck in his throat.

"But he ain't up."

"You tell him I want to see him," Bill's voice was more harsh than he intended, and the boy, his jaw dropping, scurried out of the office and up the stairs. Pete had to knock several times before there was a response. Then came a muffled, "What is it?"

"Mr. Siddal wants to see you." The name "Siddal" woke Con at once.

"Tell him to wait. When I'm dressed I'll ring."

PETE descended as quickly as he had gone up the stairs and delivered the message verbatim. Rader came into the office then, wiping his mustache.

"We're serving breakfast if you'd like some."

"No, thanks." Bill took a pipe from his pocket, filled and lighted it and sat down in a chair by the window.

The hotel proprietor, noting Bill's grim face and haggard eyes, wondered what had happened. When his son whispered that Bill Siddal had sent for the circus performer Rader anticipated a scene and preened himself to become a witness.

But he was to be disappointed. The board behind the desk registered a bell ringing in 44. Pete hurried off to answer it and came back to tell Bill that Mr. David wanted him to come up to his room.

Bill's steps lagged as he moved down the hall. His shoes seemed weighted with lead and his body scarcely less heavy. Con welcomed him in the doorway, offering his hand which Bill ignored.

"I asked you up here," Con said with an airy grace he did not feel, "because I imagined you had something to say to me privately."

"I have."

"Mind if I drink some coffee while we talk?"

"Go ahead," Bill looked steadily at the other man, taking in every detail of black hair, olive skin,

"No, thanks."

Con sat down at the rickety table on which the tray rested and poured a cup of coffee. He drank it in one swallow and turned to Bill. "Well, what brought you here?"

"An anonymous letter," Bill answered slowly. "I did not want to insult my wife by asking her about it. So I came to you."

My garden is a pleasant place
Of sun glory and leafy grace,
There's an ancient nut-tree
Where merry warblers sing to me,
And an old grape arbor where
A robin builds her nest, and there
Above the lima beans and peas
She croons her little melodies.
Her blue eggs hidden in the green
Fastness of that leafy screen.
Here are bright zinnias that bees
Fly far to visit; and sweet-peas,
Like little butterflies new-born,
And over by the tasseled corn
Are sun flowers and hollyhocks.
And pink and yellow four-o'clocks,
Here are humming birds that come
To seek the jill delphinium,
Songless bird and scentless flower
Communing in a golden hour.

Circle No. 5 of the Womans Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church held their June meeting at the home of Miss Louise Hanegehn at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. A most interesting and helpful Bible study was conducted by Miss Mamie Twitcheh, Misses Nellie Porter, Miriam Carlin, Margaret and Helen Betts and Louise Hanegehn gave interesting facts about Mexico. Following the program the hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. A. F. Hanegehn, served a most tempting plate with fruit punch. Miss Virginia Berry was presented with a lovely remembrance gift as she is leaving this week with her mother and brother to join Mr. Berry in their new home in Virginia.

The following personal from the Texarkana Gazette will be of interest to the many friends of Miss Marshall in the city: "Miss Mary Bell Marshall who has been attending the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston, Mass., will leave Saturday for O'Leary's Head, Maine, where she will be a member of the faculty of Bancroft school for children during the summer, remaining until September. The main headquarters of the school is Haddonville, N. J."

An unusually large and appreciative audience gathered at the City Auditorium Tuesday evening to hear a very clever program given by the primary pupils sponsored by Mrs. John Wellborn, assisted by Miss Guileli Baeze. The program, as a whole, was very unusual as it was given entirely from memory and consisted of a toy orchestra followed by a very interesting little sketch called a Fairy Play, in which a number of piano pupils gave a recital, showing the importance of practicing. In this Fairy Play, the audience had the pleasure of hearing Peter Pumpkin Eater, Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Little Boy Blue, The Prince, Sambo, Jack the Giant Killer, all brought about in a dream by Miss Frances Mitchell under the wand of a fairy, little Miss Frances Brunner. The harmonica band was especially entertaining, the members playing by note, from memory such tunes as "The Old Spinning Wheel" and "Long Ago, the latter being sung by four little girls in costume. This unusually clever little program closed with Home on the Range being sung by three boys in costume.

Strike Threatened in Steel Thursday

Workers' Leaders Insist on Liberal Union Recognition

By the Associated Press
Threats of a nation-wide steel strike had solidified Thursday into a concrete movement for a walkout of the union contingent of the nation's quarter of a million raw metal workers.
Demanding recognition, the right to bargain collectively, officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers, completed plans for a meeting Thursday at which formal strike call is expected to be issued, unless industry capitulates.
"We are asking only one thing, recognition," said Michael Tighe, president of the association.
The industrialists were represented as opposed to union recognition on the grounds that it involved abrogation of the "open shop principle," but agreed to a government proposal for a three-man arbitration board.
The suggested mediation board, however, was rejected by union leaders and President Roosevelt was said to have taken under discussion other possible methods of adjudication.
Green Patton, negro, employed in the Republic Steel corporation's Alabama iron ore fields, where a strike is in progress, was stabbed to death. A half dozen persons were injured in disorders punctuated by bombings, shootings and fist fights.

Hamer asked why he hadn't killed the one who escaped.
A Fair Fighter
"Hell," Frank answered in disgust. "I can't shoot a man in the back. I'll get him some other time."
Hamer went to the hospital, and upon learning his right arm was ruined for pistol work, practiced with his left until he could draw and shoot with it as well as ever he had with the right. Then he hunted Texas for the outlaw who had escaped him. He found him, took away the killer's gun, and lugged him to the penitentiary.
"Furthermore, Frank Hamer's the ranger who, single-handed, made the famous cleanup of Bogert, the Panhandle oil boom town of some years ago.
"In view of which, and a lot more of Hamer's achievements over the years, it seems to me the Barrow killing could have been handled in a fashion that would have served better taste and saner purpose."

"Cat and Fiddle" at the Saenger

Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald in Six Song Hits

After almost half a year of production, "The Cat and the Fiddle" comes to the screen of the Saenger Thursday and Friday as one of the most pretentious offerings of this big week of hits.
Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald are the co-stars. Each is not only a romantic favorite, but an accomplished singer. They are teamed for the first time in this production, but their success has been so instantaneous and outstanding that M-G-M is now reported to be seeking a new vehicle in which they may appear together. It is a romantic musical drama and includes such hit song numbers as "The Night Was Made for Love," "She Didn't Say Yes," "Try to Forget," "One Moment Alone," "A New Love Is Old" and "The Love Parade."
Although there is a wealth of music throughout the play, it is not, strictly speaking, a musical picture. It is instead a story with music. Each of the numbers sung by the co-stars and members of the supporting cast has a definite place in the story and advances or adds to the interest of the drama being enacted.

Graves Wins Over Alabama Opponent

Defeats Dixon in Run-Off Primary for Governorship

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—A 30-year precedent that no Alabama governor could return to the office after having been defeated as former Governor Bibb Graves pulled steadily away from Maj. Frank M. Dixon of Birmingham, his opponent in Tuesday's "run-off" Democratic primary.
Returns from 1,537 boxes out of 2,191 gave Graves 113,955, a lead of 18,906 over Dixon whose total was 95,049, which observers said was insurmountable, without an unprecedented shift in the trend of the present vote.
Graves ran on his record of 1927 to 1931 which was the principle issues in the campaign of Gov. B. M. Miller four years ago. Graves held up his record as one of progress and declared his return to office would assure "peace and prosperity."

LOUISIANA REBELS

manding property tax relief without additional or new taxes were submitted Tuesday night to a monster state wide mass meeting of milling thousands assembled in protest against the state administration's legislative tax program and general policies.
The resolutions, laid before an enormous crowd brought to the capital by special trains and almost every known transportation means from every principal city of the state, framed the threat of force at the outset and "denounced any attempt to increase the burden of taxation in Louisiana."
W. H. Hodges of Elm Grove, stalwart and consistent administration oppositionist and foe of Senator Long, led off the speaking program with a scorching denunciation of what he termed an "attempt of the administration through the present legislature to legislate upon the people of Louisiana a legislative program as iniquitous, so utterly intolerable, that only the mind of the devil himself could have conceived it."
Hodges sounded the keynote with an arraignment of the state administration which functions under the leadership of Long.
He said this was an assemblage of "outraged citizens" and charged that the people of Louisiana during the past six years had witnessed the "dry rot of the moral fabric of our citizenship."
Denouncing the state administration during those years, Hodges declared: "They have seen the state plunged into bankruptcy through the connivance of the executive and certain powerful interests, and have seen the same interests go on the rocks of financial ruin by the prosecution of that same executive through a subservient bank department, precipitating a cataclysm of distress unparalleled in our memory."

Klan Issue Raised
BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—The Ku Klux Klan issue was dusted off Tuesday as Alabama decided its gubernatorial run-off election and named two congressmen.
The Klan issue, dormant for several years, was injected into the campaign by Major Frank M. Dixon of Birmingham, who is opposing the incumbent, Bibb Graves, in the race for governor.
Dixon, an attorney, comparatively new to state politics, declared the organization was being revived to aid Graves. Both the Klan and Graves denied this.

In the first primary, Graves led the ticket with 131,000 votes, ahead of Dixon by more than 34,000, but not having a majority.
In the fifth district congressional race Representative Miles B. Algood is opposed by Major Joe Starnes of Guntersville and in the ninth Congressmen George Huddleston's opponent is Walter Brower, an attorney favoring public ownership of utilities.

Weight Reduced From 180 to 137

"Wonderful," She Says

Here's today's story of a woman who knew she carried too much fat and decided the right way to get rid of it—just a few words that wise fat folks should heed—worth reading.

"I use Kruschen Salts to reduce. It's wonderful. Take it daily and eat what I want and still lose. I did weigh 180 now 137. Want to get down to 125."

Mrs. Leonard Bass, Ft. Atkinson, Wis., Feb. 6, 1934.

When you take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water—you not only lose in weight but you put healthy activity into your whole body—you feel younger and look it—get it at John S. Gibson Drug Co. or any drugstore in the world.—adv.
